The first year of 15 months involves didactic coursework, which is followed by a 12-month clinical clerkship year of 8 rotations in primary care and critical care medicine. Models 1 and 2 are equivalent and offer comparable experiences. Each of the 8 clerkship rotations run five weeks, where the sixth week is dedicated for end-of-rotation examinations, case presentations, student advising, and student preparation readiness for the next month rotation. This is a sample representation of rotation sequencing only; scheduling is based on preceptor and clinical site availability. Students will be assigned to clinical rotations at program-approved training sites, many of which are based in medically underserved areas throughout Michigan. Students are required to accept rotation assignments as assigned by the Program. (Occasionally, out-of-state placement opportunities approved by the program may present and be offered to students of interest.) The clinical year closes with summative examinations and a clinical practicum review, and graduation from the program. (Updated May 16, 2014 - gardo1jj@cmich.edu)
