The Cultural and Global Residential College is a community for international and domestic students who are passionate about cultural and global experiences. Living in the residential college allows students to participate in intellectual and cultural exchanges in one of the most attractive locations on campus.
Program highlights
Through a partnership with the School of Public Service and Global Citizenship and the College of Humanities and Social and Behavioral Sciences, the CGRC offers an international-domestic floor in Herrig Hall, globally-themed hall programs, faculty workshops and hands-on service learning experiences.

Community: Live with others interested in cultural and global studies.

Academics: Learn more effectively by taking classes and studying with others in the residential college for your first semester and beyond.

Service: Take part in regular community service with your peers to build important connections and develop interpersonal skills.

Scholarship: Connect with opportunities for research, professional development and cultural experiences to build global skills for success.
