Majoring in international relations provides the expertise needed to confront challenges facing the international community and nation-states in the global economy. Students develop an understanding of international security issues, international organizations, and threats to human rights and the global environment. They also gain cultural competency through the study of comparative politics.
Program highlights
Add one of the following optional certificates: Global Governance & Advocacy, Governance of Nations, or International Security Studies

Internship opportunities at national and international organizations, including The Washington Center

Accelerated MA program that lets you start your master’s degree during your senior year

Career options
» Activist, Advocate/Organizer
» Attorney
» CIA Analyst or Agent
» Congressional Office/Committee Staffer
» Foreign Service Officer
» International Agency Officer
» International Research Specialist
» Legislative Assistant
» Lobbyist
» Policy Analyst
» Public Affairs Director

For information
Department of Political Science & Public Administration
Anspach Hall 247
Mount Pleasant, MI 48859
989-774-3442
www.chsbs.cmich.edu/political_science

@CmichPoliSci