HISTORIOGRAPHY

Spring 2018 Semester

Readings will include, but are not limited to:

Dr. Kathleen Donohue | Wednesdays 6:30 - 9:20pm | Powers 135

In this required seminar, we will examine some of the most important methodologies and philosophies that have developed over the last 100 years in the field of history and will explore several of the most influential new fields that have developed since the 1970s and 1980s, including cultural history, gender history, environmental history, everyday life history, spatial history, and world history, among others. By the end of this seminar, you should have a good understanding of historiographical and methodological concepts such as Marxism, Foucault, gender, Annales history, transnationality and borderlands, etc.
