

Anne Miller Quimper Award

The Anne Miller-Quimper Scholarship Award was established in 1991 by friends and family in memory of Anne Miller-Quimper (1940-1980), an alumnus of the school psychology program, to support thesis and dissertation research of school psychology graduate students.

Project criteria:

Study involves working with children from birth to age 5, children or youth from diverse ethnic, racial, or low-income backgrounds, or studies involving students with low-incidence disabilities. Proposal in other areas that have a high probability of being published can be considered.

The award is for empirical research and not for opinion-based papers, theoretical position papers, nor for support of studies involving existing data sets. Rather, it is for assessment or interventions that require careful and systematic objective data collection in a prospective manner.

Proposals that appear to lead to publishable studies receive priority.
