A New Program with Fellow-Directed Learning Opportunities

The Central Michigan University (CMU) College of Medicine’s Psychiatry Residency program was created to develop and educate psychiatric physicians to deliver high-quality care to underserved areas and the surrounding region. The program is expanding significantly because of its success and the considerable needs of local communities and individuals. Many recent graduates decide to stay and practice in the region for life, lifestyle, and professional reasons.

CMU’s Child and Adolescent Psychiatry Fellowship program is new for 2019. The program is designed to bring the College’s focused curriculum together with the specific interests of each applicant to tailor a unique learning and clinical experience based on the Fellow’s input, direction, and professional development goals.

The curriculum is remarkable for its academic excellence, diversity of clinical settings, and hands-on approach.

Fellows benefit from working with leading faculty in general and specialized psychiatry with extensive experience in the effective treatment of child, adolescent, and family issues. This includes a distinct focus on emerging practices in trauma-informed care and addressing diverse childhood experiences.

Rigorous Training and Extensive Clinical Care Opportunities

The Child and Adolescent Psychiatry Fellowship is a two-year, Accreditation Council for Graduate Medical Education (ACGME)-approved fellowship program with three positions per training year. The program provides rigorous training and extensive clinical opportunities in the treatment of a variety of psychiatric illnesses. Candidates can feel confident that this advanced training will allow them to manage future clinical challenges because of the guidance of our program’s leading faculty and program supervisors.
