MIDOCs is a new, state-funded program set up to expand residency positions in select specialties to recruit and retain physicians in underserved areas in the State of Michigan. MIDOCs residencies may feature a variety of enhanced curricular elements in areas such as ambulatory care, quality improvement, population health, interprofessional collaboration, and care of diverse and underserved populations. This is particularly advantageous to students already committed to primary care and serving medically underserved populations.

MIDOCs offers up to $75,000 in loan repayment to residents who enter these positions in exchange for a commitment to practice for at least two years immediately after residency in a rural or urban underserved setting in Michigan approved by the MIDOCs Consortium. This allows students to choose primary care specialties, while reducing medical school loan debt. Residents must also agree to forego any sub-specialty training for at least two years post-residency.

Why Choose a CMU Residency?
CMU residency programs are fully aligned and committed to serving the underserved and addressing Michigan’s most pressing public health concerns. CMU residents are advocates for patients and help improve access to high-quality care in the Great Lakes Bay Region. Our residents train in a team-oriented, supportive, and multicultural environment that shapes them into competent and confident physicians.

Additionally, learners experience hands-on patient care through our Accredited Medical Simulation Center, a state-of-the-art facility. Residency programs have monthly simulation sessions with standardized patients, high fidelity simulation, and numerous procedural models.

Central Michigan University College of Medicine offers qualified interviewed candidates who match into our Residency Program to participate in MIDOCs.

MIDOCs requires:
- Two-year commitment to practice in an underserved area post residency
- Applicants cannot require a visa
- $75,000 loan repayment is contingent on fulfilling the two-year commitment to practice in an underserved community
