

Learning Beyond Borders: Voices of Displaced Students

March 20, 6:00 p.m. @ Pearce 127

Mr. M'Munga Lulaca fled from the Democratic Republic of the Congo and found refuge at the Dzaleka refugee camp where he worked as a teacher for over a decade before resettling to the U.S. in November 2023 and is currently a student at CMU.

Mr. Shofi Alom, a Rohingya refugee who arrived in the U.S. in 2016, is pursuing computer science and electrical engineering at Western Michigan University.

Ms. Shukurani Nsengiyumva arrived in the U.S. in 2013 as a Rwandan/Burundian refugee. She graduated from Kalamazoo College with a B.A. in Psychology and is currently working as a Program Manager at the Alzheimer's Association.

Ms. Emily Worline is the Founder and Executive Director of Refugee Outreach Collective (ROC) and is a law student at Case Western Reserve University. She is passionate about advocating for safe paths for forced migrants and in her free time enjoys playing with her dog.

This talk is sponsored by the Dr. Harold Abel Endowed Lecture Series in the Study of Dictatorship, Democracy and Genocide, the Critical Engagements initiative, and the Refugee Outreach Collective at CMU.
